

Formation Presentation - License of International Relations

Field: LAW and POLITICAL SCIENCES

Study: POLITICAL SCIENCES

Specialization: LICENCE of INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

❖ INTRODUCTION TO THE LICENSE'S PROGRAM

"The curriculum License in the "International Relations" program is one of the main specializations of the Political Sciences Department. It comes after the students complete four semesters in the common core, during which the student receives a set of theoretical knowledge related to Political Sciences. The student then moves on to the third year, specializing in International Relations. Here, they are provided with a comprehensive set of necessary knowledge for the field of International Relations, including international politics, foreign policy and diplomacy, negotiation techniques, analysis of international conflicts, international organizations, and an overview of the theories of international relations. This helps the students analyze and interpret complex and interrelated international phenomena."

❖ FORMATION OBJECTIVES:

In addition to the theoretical cognitive knowledge that the student receives throughout six full semesters, the specialization in International Relations aims to achieve the following objectives:

- The International Relations specialization opens up the possibility of working in various sectors, such as foreign affairs, by joining available opportunities, especially diplomatic missions. In addition to other sectors.
- Graduates can join political, diplomatic, security, strategic, and even foresight research centers.
- The specialization facilitates access to the world of media, especially in the field of political analysis, starting from the training provided in the specialization, which equips them with mechanisms of analysis and knowledge related to political phenomena in general.

- The specialization provides good opportunities for joining various government and non-governmental international organizations.
