

Formation Presentation - License of International Relations

Field: LAW and POLITICAL SCIENCES

Study: POLITICAL SCIENCES

Specialization: LICENCE of POLITICAL and ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION

❖ INTRODUCTION TO THE LICENSE'S PROGRAM

"A License's degree in Political and Administrative Organization is one of the main specializations within the Political Science Department. It comes after the student completes four semesters in the common core, during which the student receives a set of theoretical knowledge related to political science. Then, the student moves to the third year where he specialize in Political and Administrative Organization. Here, the student is provided with a comprehensive knowledge of the field, including both public policy and sectoral policies, as well as general administration, local communities, human resources management, and various local or national developmental approaches."

❖ FORMATION OBJECTIVES:

In addition to the theoretical cognitive knowledge that the student receives throughout six full semesters, the specialization in political and administrative organization aims to achieve the following objectives:

- Effective contribution of graduates in managing and operating various public facilities and institutions by utilizing the knowledge they possess, especially in the field of new public management. This can be an added value for these facilities and institutions by embodying real governance that eliminates the bureaucracy they suffer from.
- Possibility of engaging in various non-governmental organizations and playing leadership roles in the field of community and voluntary work, in order to achieve the desired goals of their existence.
- The specialization provides good opportunities for graduates to engage in political work and advance in it due to their cognitive formation in political systems, elections, political parties, and their mechanisms of operation. This will be one of the main factors in moving the wheel of local and national development forward.
